2. Migration Data Issues

MigFacts: International Migration

244 million international migrants globally in 2015¹

An international migrant is a person who is living in a country other than his or her country of birth²

As the world population grows so does the number of international migrants: there are three times more international migrants in 2015 than in 1970

The international migrant population has remained relatively stable over the last few decades: 2.2 to 3.3 per cent of the world's population

244 million international migrants in 2015 out of a global population of 7.3 billion

48% of international migrants are women

39 is the median age of an international migrant

Data issues and gaps

- Lack of reliable, comparable, timely and disaggregated data on migrant stocks and flows
- Limitations of traditional sources of migration data
 - Population censuses: main source but infrequent
 - Household surveys: costly and methodologically problematic (sample size)
 - Administrative records: events, not people
- (Some of the) knowledge gaps
 - Migration flows
 - Public opinion on migration
 - Migration policies
 - Migration and the environment
 - Well-being of migrants
 - Irregular migration
 - Migration potential/forecasting

The New York Declaration

For the first time on 19 September 2016 Heads of State and Government came together to discuss, at the global level within the UN General Assembly, issues related to migration and refugees. This sent an important political message that migration and refugee matters have become major issues in the international agenda. In adopting the New York Declaration for Refugees and Migrants, the 193 UN Member States recognized the need for a
